

ABSTRACT

Embodiments of the present invention relate to systems and methods for partial merges for sub-register data operations. An instruction is examined before execution to determine which portion of a source register identified in the instruction should remain unchanged into a destination register. A portion of the source register determined to remain unchanged is moved into the destination register before instruction execution is complete.

5

[illegible]